REDUCING THE COST.

The whole country is experimenting to bring consumer and producer closer. Good roads and motor trucks are regarded as furnishing a solution of the primary cost. Next come marketing conditions which can be arranged easily after the movement is fairly begun. California and Utah and the chief exemplars of this method of getting together and, so far, results show the effort has been crowned with success. The only difference of opinion is the way of going about it to secure the proper introduction. It means a breaking away from old forms of trading and substituting something new that has the merit of cheapening costs. Pennsylvania, Delaware and other congested states with the best railroad transportation, have found the direct system of trading the best way of cutting out the middlemen and jobbers whose profits eat an enormous hole in the cost. If the farmers and artisans once can find a common level on which to trade it is manifest that each side will be the gainer. Nevada should not be any exception to the rule for the distances are not so great that they offer any serious handicap to a well regulated effort to readjust marketing conditions. A recent experience at Ely suggests the facility with which the change may be accomplished. In the case in point two truck loads of grades and dried fruit were hauled from St. George, Utah, to Ely, a distance of about 300 miles. The ranchers disposed of their products without trouble and expect to return in a short time with a more diversified stock of all sorts of foodstuffs. Three hundred miles is a long drive to market but the farmers of St. George have thousands of tons going to waste for which there is no local market, hence they find it profitable to undertake the long haul to dispose of their surplus. Within a radius of 100 miles of Tonopah are some of the finest farms in the country which are maintained chiefly as stock ranches with farming regarded as a side venture. Many of these growers have small orchards for their own supply. These orchards are not extensive yet, according to reports, apples and other hardy fruits are going to waste or being fed to cattle. By instituting a truck service the surplus could find a ready cash market in Tonopah at prices showing a considerable reduction from the charges local consumers have to pay under the present arrangement of bringing in from the west in expensive refrigerator cars and disposing through regular channels which involve paying three and four profits which are taken out of the consumers' slender purses.

It is only a matter for some enterprising rancher to make a beginning towards offering the surplus at prices that will compete with the well graded stock coming in the regular way. If the Mormons of St. George can realize a profit after a motor haul of 300 miles it appears that ranchers at one-fourth that distance would be supremely happy in establishing an outlet for their commodities. In winter the line of provisions might include long killed pork, farm made sausage, poultry and dairy products that always command the highest price. Farmers in Fish Lake valley are offering potatoes in the ground at about a half a pound which should furnish an incentive for traders to dig, sack and ship to compete with the Tonopah retail price of five and six cents a pound. Many other examples could be cited to show the opportunity for cultivating the trade. All that is required is the initiative and the delivery of a first class grade of commodities. The best market in Nevada is right here at the mines and any ambitious farmer can establish himself in a lucrative business.

BEATING THE DRY LAW.

California is in line to withstand the dry law for an indefinite period owing to the thrifty ranchers putting in a store of grapes against the drouth. There always is a way of beating the law or beating any game that was ever devised and the native sons are proving apt students. They have found a loophole in the definition of what constitutes a winery and, consequently the collector of internal revenue is swamped with applications from individuals that will sanction the manufacture of wine "for medicinal, sacramental and mechanical purposes" on execution of a bond binding the principals and their sureties to not dispose of the wine so made for beverage purposes. Judging from the statements of applicants there are thousands of "wineries" along the Pacific coast, when as a matter of fact the applicants are for the most part private individuals seeking to take advantage of the law that will enable them to make wine for other than the designated purposes. The ultimate object of many of the petitioners is two fold, to save the ripening crops of grapes, and to be in a position to sell the wine if, later on, President Wilson should remove the war-time prohibition ban. In the meantime it is declared that there is enough wine being made for "medicinal, sacramental and mechanical purposes" to serve the churches, the physicians and all concerned for the next 100 years.

THE DOOR TO MONOPOLY.

No better scheme for crushing all competition and delivering the country into the hands of monopoly and profiteering could be devised than that of establishing a universal compulsory profit sharing and employee shop management scheme, because under such a system no one could run a losing enterprise to the point where it could get on its feet. All business would go into the hands of corporations established on a paying basis. Their business would be stabilized and profits guaranteed. But the public, which would thus lose the benefit of competition through the establishment of new enterprises, would be the "goat" of the whole arrangement. To "soak" the general, unorganized and uncaptivated public seems to be the joint purpose of the profiteer and the demagogue politician. Under existing conditions the adoption of profit sharing and co-operative management of industrial plants is gaining favor with established industries. It cannot be forced upon all industries, whether losing or gaining, made or making propositions, without opening the way to monopoly and profiteering on a scale never before dreamed of by the American people.

The Columbia, S. C. State, deprecates partisanship in the consideration of the peace treaty and league of nations covenant. The kind of non-partisanship they have in South Carolina is the sort that will not let you participate in politics unless you agree with the party in power. It prevents all unnecessary discussion of public questions. It's the sort of non-partisanship the Dixie democratic junkies would extend to the whole U. S. A. if they could.

Some more international bankers have given out statements declaring that the immediate acceptance of the covenant will open great opportunities abroad for Americans. No doubt about that, but the international bankers will get the opportunity to make the money while the American people will get the opportunity of paying the soldiers that are to sit on the lid in Europe.

Wm. B. Colver, chairman of the federal trade commission, say that the 1920 model trust is strangling all competition by controlling all the competing commodities. And Mr. Colver's party has been in power more than six years on a promise to crush the trusts!

"We must join our fortunes to the fortunes of men everywhere," says President Wilson. For a statesman who believes in Jim-crow cars and disfranchisement for the black citizens of the United States, President Wilson does a pretty good job of pretending to want to get real chummy with everybody on earth.

If as President Wilson says, the made-in-Europe covenant gives us the right to meddle in other people's business, then it gives other nations the same right to meddle in ours, doesn't it?

AMUSEMENTS

THEA BARA AT BUTLER TODAY.

Only in rare instances can a woman win a man's love by posing as a competitor. Stepping into the shoes of a notorious woman in the sole means by which the heroine of "When Men Desire" can find her way back into her lover's arms. This William Fox production, in which Thea Bara is starring, will be the offering at the Butler today. Miss Bara plays the part of an innocent young woman who is kept a prisoner by jealous rivals. No matter what she does to escape, she is always caught.

At last she dons the garments and assumes the role of a woman whose reputation is well known. Through her smiles and coquetry she wins the aid of some of the lovers of the woman she impersonates, and thus finds her true lover at last. The picture is very interesting from the start, and abounds in hairbreadth escapes and thrilling situations. Added to the features will be the Ford Educational Weekly.

Tomorrow, Lila Lee, in a splendid Paramount picture, "Such a Little Girl," and later edition of Pathe News.

Friday, William S. Hart in "The Son of Corral."

CITIZENS HOLD SACK OF TAXES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Referring to the enormous expense account of the president and his retinue at the peace conference and the European gifts which were lavished upon the president by royalty and others, Senator Sherman of Illinois said:

"There has been filed a general expense account, which reminds me of the general prayer at the conclusion of a bill of chancery, and your orator prays such other and further relief as the premises may require and as the court shall seem meet. There is not anything in the report that gives any information. Whose names are on the pay roll? Only rumor hath it so far, somewhat buttressed by a vigilant press. In understanding that Colonel House's brother-in-law is on the commission; that his son-in-law has been present in Paris, and also his son-in-law's partner. If there are any uncles and cousins and aunts their names have not yet been divulged, but I have no doubt that the ancient play of 'Pinafore' will be revived when the truth is known."

"Whose names are on the pay roll? What is their compensation? What have they done? What were their qualifications when they undertook to perform the service? Were they experts? No doubt they were. This country swarms with fat experts, made overnight by passing resolutions; but we wish to know whether they are real experts or whether they are those created by the breath of potentates or executives."

But the president returned to our shores—we are all agreed on this—with every dollar of the fund spent. He brought with him gifts presented him in Europe besides which the generosity and glory of Solomon and Croesus seem a beggar's pittance. The golden sands of wealth for the sovereigns of an antique age than that given by the American republic to its president. In return for all this he exalts this alien league exotic above the government of his own country and swears allegiance to a hybrid power across the sea. If this be his conception of official duty, fortunate indeed would it have been for this republic if he had never returned to his native shores but had remained in the arms of his foreign friends and associates."

PROTECTION FOR BRITISH MAKERS OF AUTOMOBILES

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Sept. 18.—Announcement of the government's import policy, by which it is possible for American automobile manufacturers to once more operate in the British market, has aroused English manufacturers to what they term a "sense of their danger," with the probability that the Society of British Motor manufacturers will make representations to the government.

"If imports are unrestricted," said Mr. McCormick, one of the leading members of the society, "there is grave danger of the British market being flooded next season, and the efforts of British manufacturers toward mass production will be frustrated. Thousands of people who are employed in the automobile industry will be thrown out of work."

might have found employment in the motor industry will thus be idle, and British manufacturers will be compelled to revert to the pre-war practice of limited production and consequent high costs. It was American legislation that built up the American trade. Why can't British legislation build up the trade here?

One motor car company announced it would retaliate by selling cars in the United States. It believes there is a good market there for high grade English cars, that shipping facilities will soon be available and that it will then be practicable to "carry the war into the enemy's country." Makers of smaller and cheaper cars will have a more awkward position to face, for falling government protection, they must bear the full brunt of the enemy onslaught.

PRINT SHOPS SHUT AGAINST DEMANDS

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Employing printers operating 250 union book and job offices in New York today forced to an issue the controversy with their pressmen and feeders over the latter's demands for a forty-four hour week and a $14 a week wage increase.

The pressmen and feeders were notified that they would not be given employment today when their contracts expire unless they are affiliated with the International Pressmen's union. The two local unions, which have seceded from the international, have 5,000 members employed in the 250 shops. In addition, the employing printers' notice will affect 10,000 printers, stereotypers, electotypers, photoengravers, binders and mailers. Officials of the local typographical union attempted to devise a plan to prevent the closing of the shops.

NO TEACHERS REMAIN.
